Stabsarzt (Lt. Col).
Early in 1944 Schwandt was made head of an independent command by HITLER known as "Geheimkommando Schwandt". His mission was to purchase abroad a variety of objects including gold, diamonds, securities as well as certain raw materials and finished products, such as silk stockings, expensive perfumery, etc. In his activities Schwandt was reporting directly to Himmler. Large sums in English bank notes were placed at his disposal for this purpose.

His main office was first at Trieste, then in Verona, and now in Milan. The purchases were stored in Verona in the 28 Truppenwirtschaftslager, former Alpine Depot. From there they were gradually distributed among various important party members, or hidden in caves in various parts of the Reich.
